SECTION 11: MEDIATION STATUS

Session 1:

- Partial agreement on temporary weekly call schedule.
- No agreement on support amount.

Session 2:

- Proposed midpoint support amount rejected.
- Disagreement on overnight visitation.

Session 3:

- Parties agree to exchange receipts monthly.
- Still no final agreement on custody/visitation matrix.

SECTION 12: PRELIMINARY LEGAL ANALYSIS (INTERNAL DRAFT)

Core determination will likely focus on best interests of the children, continuity of care, practical schooling logistics, and each parent's ability to maintain stable routines.

Financial assessment will depend on documented expenses, respondent income capacity, and proportional contribution standards. A staged visitation plan may be favored if parental conflict is high, with gradual expansion based on compliance and child welfare indicators.

Potential court outcomes include:

- Primary custody with structured visitation.
- Shared decision-making obligations for major educational/medical decisions.
- Court-calculated monthly support plus specific educational allocations.
- Arrears adjusted to proven separation/support history.

SECTION 13: RISK NOTES

- Communication hostility between parties may undermine visitation compliance.
- Incomplete expense documentation may reduce claimed support.
- Frequent school/transport changes may be viewed negatively for child stability.
- Conflicting narratives over pickup denials require objective evidence.

SECTION 14: CASE QUESTIONS FOR INSIGHTS

- 1) Which facts most strongly support primary custody?
- 2) Which evidence best supports or challenges claimed support amounts?
- 3) What visitation schedule balances child stability and parental access?
- 4) What missing evidence should counsel gather before hearing?

SECTION 15: CLOSING SUMMARY

This sample is designed for family-law RAG testing with custody, support, visitation, and child-welfare terminology. It contains structured factual chronology, disputed financial figures, and legal framing suitable for extraction, chunking, retrieval, and case-focused insight generation.
